Mr.M.Sambasiva Rao,Manager, Business management , MCX. Stated Commodity derivatives are financial instruments linked to the price movements of underlying commodities, such as oil, gold, wheat, or natural gas. These derivatives play a crucial role in trading and investment, allowing market participants to speculate on price changes or hedge against potential risks. Derivatives allow market participants to allocate, manage, or trade exposure without exchanging an underlying in the cash market. Derivatives also offer greater operational and market efficiency than cash markets and allow users to create exposures unavailable in cash markets.

The full form of MCX is Multi Commodity Exchange of India Limited. MCX is India's first commodity derivatives exchange facilitating online trading of commodity derivatives transactions. Commencing operations in 2003, MCX operates under the purview of the Securities and Exchange Board of India (SEBI).

“ Invest in Women : Accelerate Progress”

Principal ,Dr V. Sreeram Speech about International women's day-2024

Report on the guest lecturer:

Dr.P.Tejaswi,MBBS MD General Medicine, Vuyyuru Govt . Hospital, Stated

Today, I stand before you not just as a doctor, but as a daughter, a sister, a wife, and a mother. I want to share with you the story of my family, not just to provide context to my journey, but to emphasize the profound impact that familial support has had on my career as a doctor.

My mother, a pillar of strength and resilience, taught me the importance of balance and self-care. She demonstrated that being a caring and supportive presence for others starts with taking care of oneself. Her unwavering support and encouragement have been a guiding light through the challenges of medical school and beyond.

And then there's my husband, my rock and my biggest cheerleader. He has stood by my side through the highs and lows of my career, offering unwavering support and understanding. His belief in my abilities has given me the confidence to push past obstacles and strive for excellence in everything I do.

In closing, I want to express my deepest gratitude to my family for their love, their sacrifice, and their unwavering belief in me. They are not just my support system; they are my foundation, the bedrock upon which my career as a doctor stands. And as I continue on this journey, I carry their love and support with me, guiding me every step of the way.

So as you continue on your journey, I want to leave you with a few words of encouragement. Believe in yourselves. Trust in your abilities. And never let anyone tell you that you are not capable of achieving your dreams simply because you are a woman. You are strong. You are capable. And you have the power to change the world.

Today, as we celebrate International Women's Day, I want to take a moment to honor the incredible achievements of women in science and to inspire each and every one of you to pursue your passion for discovery, innovation, and exploration.

Throughout history, women have made significant contributions to the field of science, despite facing countless barriers and obstacles along the way. From Marie Curie, whose groundbreaking research on radioactivity earned her two Nobel Prizes, to Rosalind Franklin, whose work on the structure of DNA laid the foundation for modern genetics, women have played a vital role in shaping our understanding of the world around us.

But the journey for women in science has not always been easy. For far too long, women have been overlooked, marginalized, and underestimated simply because of their gender. And yet, despite these challenges, women have persisted – breaking down barriers, challenging stereotypes, and paving the way for future generations of scientists.

Today, I stand before you as a proud scientist, but also as a woman who has faced her own share of challenges and setbacks along the way. And yet, I want you to know that no matter what obstacles you may encounter on your journey, you have the power to overcome them. You have the intellect, the creativity, and the resilience to succeed in whatever field of science you choose to pursue.

As young girls, you are filled with boundless curiosity and imagination – qualities that are essential for success in science. So don't be afraid to ask questions, to explore new ideas, and to think outside the box. And remember that failure is not the end, but rather a stepping stone on the path to success.

to all the girls out there who dream of becoming scientists – never give up. Believe in yourselves. And know that the world is waiting for your brilliance, your creativity, and your boundless potential.

Thank you, and happy International Women's Day.

Today, as we gather to celebrate International Women's Day, I am deeply honored to stand before you as the President of Mahila SPOORTHY, an organization dedicated to the empowerment and advancement of women. On this special day, we come together to recognize the remarkable achievements of women around the world and to reaffirm our commitment to gender equality, justice, and empowerment for all.

Today, as we celebrate International Women's Day, let us reaffirm our commitment to creating a world where every woman and girl has the opportunity to reach her full potential – free from discrimination, violence, and oppression. Let us continue to challenge the status quo, break down barriers, and build a future where gender equality is not just a goal, but a reality.

In closing, I want to leave you with a quote from the renowned feminist and activist, Audre Lorde: "I am not free while any woman is unfree, even when her shackles are very different from my own." Let us remember that our fight for equality is not just for ourselves, but for all women – in every corner of the globe.

Thank you, and happy International Women's Day. Together, we can and will create a more just, equitable, and empowered world for all.

Stated

As we gather today to celebrate International Women's Day, I want to share with you the wisdom and experiences gained from a lifetime of navigating the complexities of womanhood. Each year, this day serves as a reminder of the incredible strength, resilience, and achievements of women around the world. But it is also a call to action – a call to empower and uplift one another, to break down barriers, and to create a more equitable and inclusive society for all.

Throughout my journey, I have encountered countless obstacles and faced numerous challenges simply because of my gender. But with each challenge, I have grown stronger. With each setback, I have become more resilient. And with each victory, I have been reminded of the incredible power that lies within each and every one of us.

As young girls, you are at the beginning of your own journey – a journey filled with endless possibilities and opportunities waiting to be seized. But I want you to know that the road ahead may not always be easy. You will face adversity. You will encounter obstacles. But never let anyone tell you that you are not capable of achieving your dreams simply because you are a girl.

You are strong. You are capable. And you have the power within you to overcome any obstacle that stands in your way. So dream big. Set ambitious goals for yourself. And never be afraid to pursue your passions with everything you've got.

But remember that true empowerment comes not just from achieving success for yourself, but from lifting others up along the way. As women, we must stand together in solidarity, supporting, encouraging, and empowering one another to reach our full potential. For when one of us succeeds, we all succeed.
