Technical Session 3: Development of Agriculture in Andhra Pradesh

S.Galab Director C.E.S.S

Andhra Pradesh, like many other parts of India, witnessed the Green Revolution in the 1960s and 1970s. This period Witnessed the introduction of high-yielding crop varieties, modern irrigation techniques, and increased use of fertilizers and pesticides, leading to substantial increases in crop yields. Irrigation plays a crucial role in the agriculture sector of Andhra Pradesh. The state has an extensive network of canals, tanks, and reservoirs. The construction of major irrigation projects like the Nagarjuna Sagar Dam, Srisailam Dam, and the Polavaram Project has significantly improved water availability for agriculture.

Technical Session 3: Theme for Discussion: Development of Agriculture in A.P

Deva Sena Naidu Retired Prof. SV University, Tirupathi

The development of agriculture in Andhra Pradesh has been a significant contributor to the state's economy and livelihood of its people. Andhra Pradesh, located on the southeastern coast of India, has a diverse agro-climatic condition that enables the cultivation of a wide range of crops. The state's agriculture has evolved over the years through various stages, driven by government policies, technological advancements, and the efforts of farmers.
